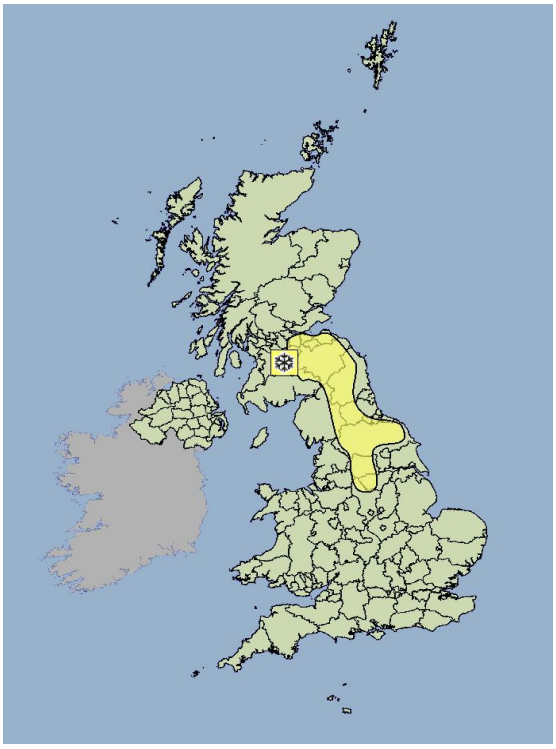
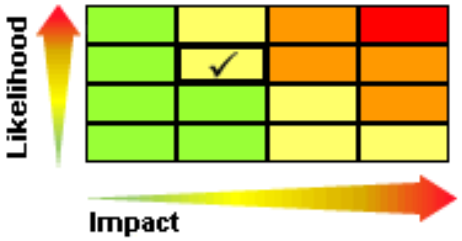
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Snow showers driven in on a strong, cold northeasterly wind will line up in places to give accumulations, especially during Friday evening and night. During Saturday morning, a gradual warming trend will turn things more to rain, though snow will continue on hills.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 18:00 on Fri, 10th Feb 2017 until 10:00 on Sat, 11th Feb 2017

Showers of sleet and snow will turn more persistent during Friday evening and overnight, leading to snow accumulations of 3-6 cm above 200 m, with as much as 10 cm above 300 m, where there will be some drifting in the strengthening winds. Some temporary, local accumulations of snow to low levels are possible, though these will tend to melt as things warm up during Saturday morning and rain starts to dominate. Slippery conditions are likely, along with the risk of disruption to transport, especially on higher level routes.
